Marvellous McQueens' booby bikini break!

On-screen TV sisters are reunited in Dubai for a sun-kissed Emirates escape!

We've all woken up at some point on a Sunday with a hangover so severe, you think it might actually kill you. So what do you do? Put on a brew, crash on the sofa under a blanket and turn on the girly goodness that is Hollyoaks.

For the last nine years, Gemma Merna and Jennifer Metcalfe's McQueen sisters have been there to gently soothe our pain with their unfeasibly fit physiques. But last December, the sexy soap stars finally bid farewell to Chester, breaking the hearts of many a man across the country.

So, understandably having not seen each other for some time, the perky pair decided to jet off for a naughty bikini-filled holiday in the deliriously hot city of Dubai. And as we all know, when the McQueen sisters get together, things get raucous! →

Jennifer
Metcalfe
& Gemma Merna!

Flip for more McQueen magnificence!

"We have a really good time whenever we're out," Gemma once revealed. "We keep each other's energy levels really high and always hunt men together. You could say she's my wing woman!"

However, with Jennifer making a surprise back-from-the-dead return to the soap, it's anyone's guess what Gemma plans to do now. "I don't really know what I'll do. I'd definitely love to work in a zoo at some point in my life."

Well, it might not be the ZOO you had in mind, Gemma, but we're sure we can find room for you...

Batman: Arkham Knight

Rocksteady's third and final Batman game is winging its way to next-gen consoles this June. Just in time to take over your summer...

The world's greatest detective is back. And he's better than ever.

After releasing two critically-acclaimed games, Rocksteady's final hurrah is set to go out all guns blazing.

Here's all you need to know about the Dark Knight's fond farewell...

THE BATMOBILE'S DEBUT!

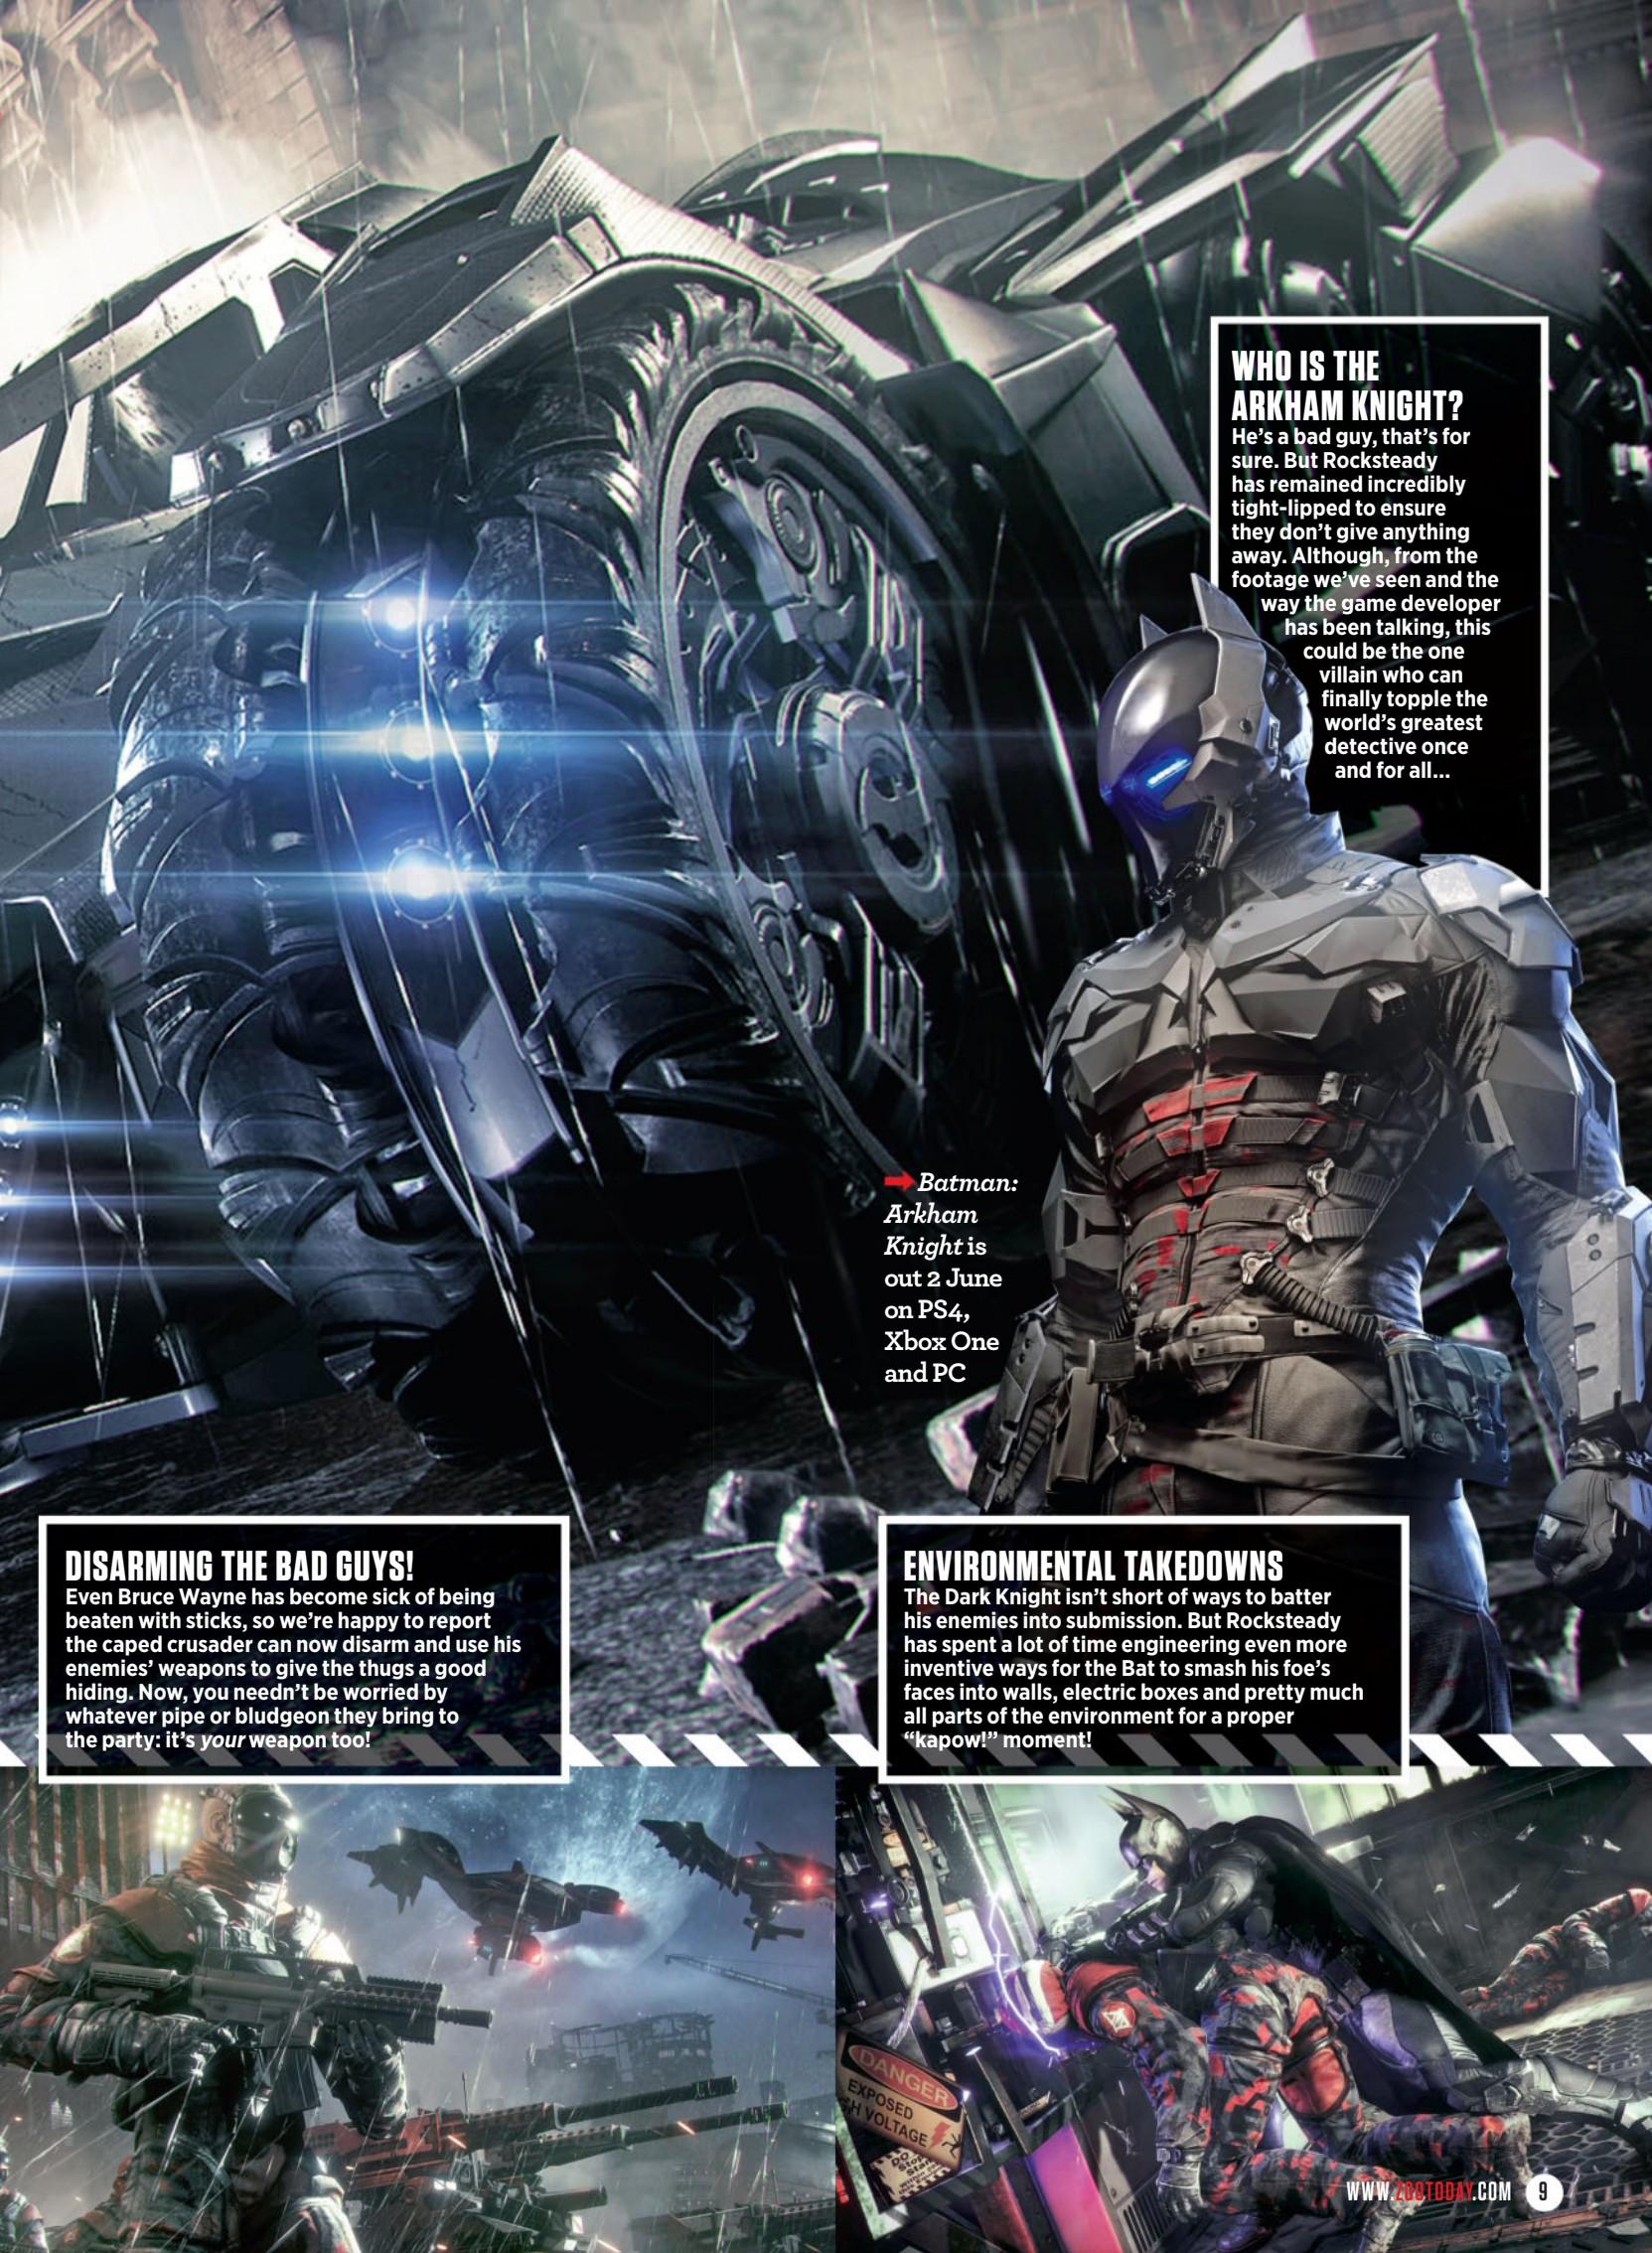

The Batmobile isn't just a car: it's Batman's (and your) new best friend. It offers two unique modes (one that lets you cruise Gotham and another battle option, which turns it into a smooth, hovering tank complete with rockets, boosting and a riot control gun), and you can even control it remotely using your Batphone. Ring, ring.

BAD GUYS GALORE!

Scarecrow might be taking centre stage, but the rogues gallery is as big as ever with Penguin, Two-Face, Harley Quinn, Riddler, Firefly, Poison Ivy and plenty more villains tossed into the mix to ensure the Dark Knight has a torrid time once more protecting the citizens of Gotham.

GOTHAM IS MASSIVE!

If you were wondering exactly how Rocksteady planned to plonk a new Batmobile into a reasonably-sized sandbox game, then the answer is simple: they've made the game's map bigger than any of the previous instalments. Or, to be more precise, it's five times the size of Arkham City...

WHO IS THE ARKHAM KNIGHT?

He's a bad guy, that's for sure. But Rocksteady has remained incredibly tight-lipped to ensure they don't give anything away. Although, from the footage we've seen and the way the game developer has been talking, this could be the one villain who can finally topple the world's greatest detective once and for all...

→ Batman: Arkham Knight is out 2 June on PS4, Xbox One and PC

DISARMING THE BAD GUYS!

Even Bruce Wayne has become sick of being beaten with sticks, so we're happy to report the caped crusader can now disarm and use his enemies' weapons to give the thugs a good hiding. Now, you needn't be worried by whatever pipe or bludgeon they bring to the party: it's your weapon too!

ENVIRONMENTAL TAKEDOWNS

The Dark Knight isn't short of ways to batter his enemies into submission. But Rocksteady has spent a lot of time engineering even more inventive ways for the Bat to smash his foe's faces into walls, electric boxes and pretty much all parts of the environment for a proper "kapow!" moment!

1,018lb? No problemo...

They don't call Stoke's Eddie Hall "The Beast" for nothing, y'know...

RECORD DEADLIFT: ARNIE APPROVED!

*You're a fing
compared to me!*

Let's get the blindingly obvious out of the way first: these last few weeks for English sport have been pretty dire. Premier League clubs crashed left, right and centre in the European competitions, and England's cricket team wrapped up their abysmal World Cup with a loss to the mighty sporting nation of, er, Bangladesh.

But there is one man flying the flag for the UK, and his name is Eddie Hall. The Stoke-on-Trent strongman smashed the deadlift world record at the Arnold Classic weight lifting competition in Australia, as the British deadlifter – appropriately nicknamed “The Beast” – hoisted a gargantuan 1,018lb (the equivalent of one Polar bear, or seven Floyd Mayweather Jrs), all with none other than The Terminator himself – Arnold Schwarzenegger – watching his every strain!

“Arnie was cheering me on and he went to give me a high five to congratulate me, but I left him hanging,” revealed the meathead.

Much to The Terminator’s delight though, he managed to grab Hall for a high five a few moments later. The Beast probably guessed he’d be back...

The REAL naked chef

If BBC cooking shows were like this, maybe we'd never order another takeaway!

This smoking hot chef is taking YouTube by storm, and it's easy to see why given her ludicrously tasty er... recipes!

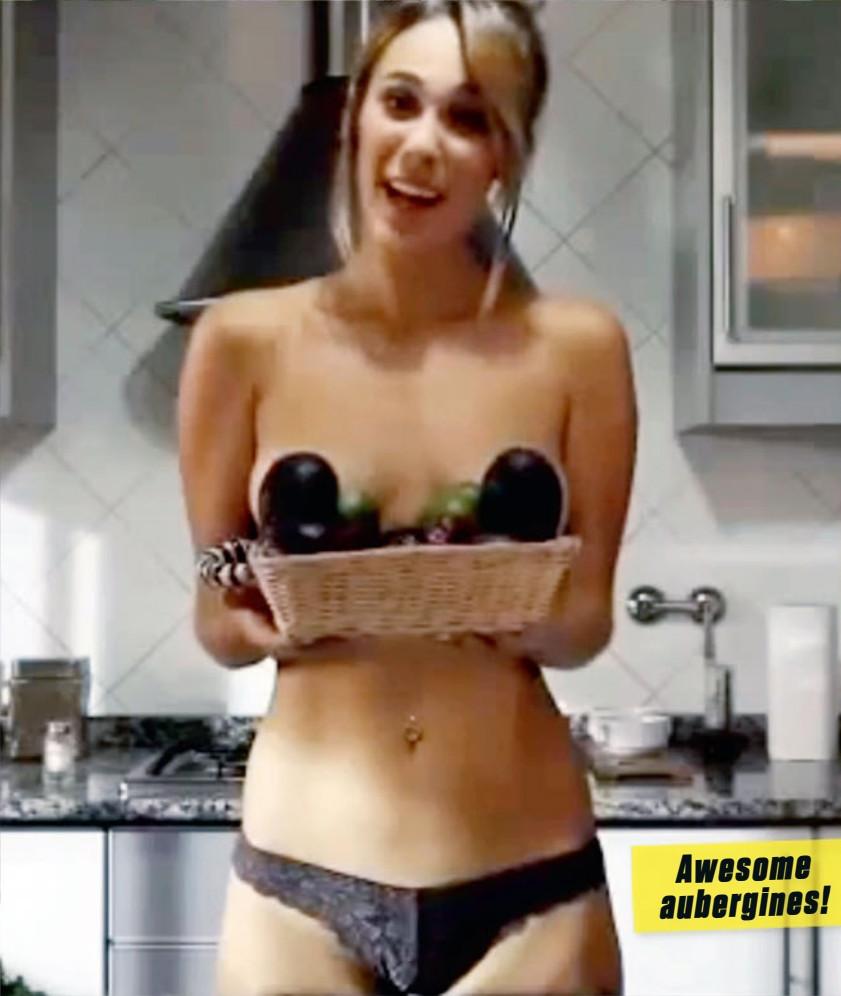

The 24-year-old Argentinian, better known as Chef Jenn, has uploaded three corking cooking cuts to her A Fuego Maximo YouTube channel so far. But after amassing half a million views in under a week, the scorching South American has been better received than Kanye West's stream of semi-naked Kim K tweets.

The only issue we can foresee is anyone hoping to glean any genuine cooking advice might be sorely disappointed, as the cracking cook doesn't speak a word of English.

Still, you know what people say. You eat with your eyes first...

W.T.F!

The maddest thing we've seen this week!

CRASH! BANG! WALLOP!

The only thing more amazing than this crash in Florida, is the driver walked away without a scratch!

Get FACT

Dragsters can reach over 300mph...before you've even read this sentence

Forget those harmless prangs you rubberneck at on the M4 that cause massive tailbacks. Because they pale in comparison to this ridiculous smash from the Auto Plus Raceway in Florida, where race driver Larry Dixon's car, travelling at 280mph, snapped in half and launched 30 feet into the air – before the driver walked away unscathed!

"I was just wanting it to land on the track and not in the dirt," Dixon told reporters. "That's the biggest deal. Going that fast, you can tumble and that isn't good for your insides. But everything did its job. My car's a mess, but I'm still here!"

Unbelievably, this isn't the first time the drag racer has been involved in a life-threatening smash. Back in 2000, he was involved in another incident where his eye "literally popped out of its socket".

After gawking at these pictures, we think you might need to pop your peepers back in, too!

ZOO BRITAIN'S COOLEST MAN 2015

...in association with #MenUnited

Joe Hart

None other than Lionel Messi labelled the City keeper a "phenomenon" following his Camp Nou heroics. There's surely no higher praise than that? Well, except for a Coolest Man Award, that is...

Eddie Hall

"The Beast" from Stoke-on-Trent became a new world record holder when he dead lifted a Herculean 72.7st – the equivalent weight of one Polar bear! A Coolest Man trophy is far lighter, Eddie!

Dermot O'Leary

The X Factor host can dance with the best of them, but he went up in our estimations when his 24-hour boogie marathon for Comic Relief raised £500k. Will he dance away with our next Coolest Man trophy?

EXCLUSIVE TO ZOO!

My budget's better!

Great Britain would be a much healthier place if I were in charge. It's good to see the Government raising the minimum wage, but is 20p really enough? People are paying more than ever for their rent, bills and food. It's sad to see a bag of chips costing less than a salad. We'd see a lot of strain taken off of the NHS if we made the country healthier.

I know how much it costs to lead a healthy life; I'm fortunate that I can afford it. I understand why people choose a burger and chips that only cost a couple of quid. We need to make junk food a luxury that people can't afford and lower the price of a quality meal. It's a shame we'll probably never see it, as David Cameron and his gang are happier appealing to the masses by lowering beer duty instead!

EMAIL YOUR QUESTIONS FOR DAVID TO HAYEMAKER@ZOOTODAY.COM

RIP Braydon Smith

It's an absolute tragedy to see anybody die, but it deeply saddened me to see upcoming Australian boxer Braydon Smith lose his life, after collapsing in his dressing room after a fight. My thoughts go out to his family and friends.

Braydon always spoke of the positives in boxing, but what happened to him was a tragic accident. Of course there's always a risk with boxing, but it can happen to anyone in sport.

IN NEED OF A HAYEMAKER THIS WEEK... MALIK SCOTT

It's not unusual for me to be called out by middle-of-the-road boxers. They'd earn more fighting me than for a shot at a world title. We're all in boxing to make a living.

I don't know why Malik Scott is chancing his arm. Dereck Chisora knocked him out a few years ago and I've already knocked Chisora out! He's not someone I'll be returning to the ring for.

Good for Glastonbury

Kanye West is a perfect headliner for Glasto – he'll raise the roof! I know it's traditionally a rock'n'roll festival, but times are changing. Jay-Z was great in 2008: he played with a band and brought a rock style to rap.

Kanye has loads of hits and is creative, so I'm sure he's plotting how to bring his set to life!

ASK DAVID!

I'm a big fan and can't wait for your return to the ring. But who will be your trainer?

ROB DUFFILL, Lichfield

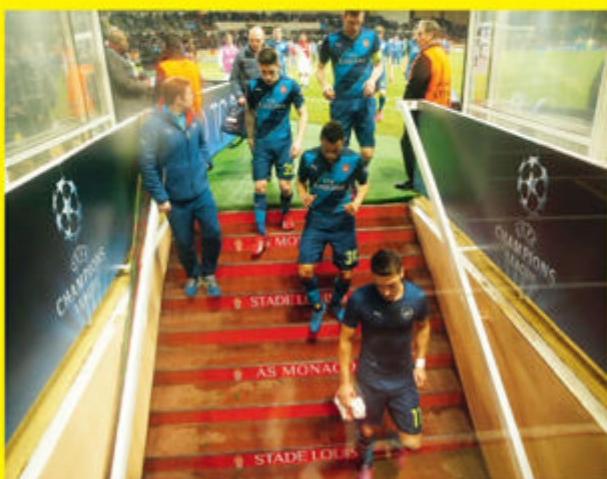

At the moment it's unknown, but it'll be someone that's good at what they do and I'll need to trust them.

There are tons of trainers that aren't right for the job, so I need to be sure with my choice. I've got no immediate plans to return, though – I've booked too many exciting trips for the summer. But after they're done I'll be looking into a few options for a fight.

Sappy sportsmen

During Arsenal's second-leg tie with Monaco, Mesut Ozil was caught swapping shirts with an opposition player at half time. I found it really odd, as the Gunners needed two more goals to qualify but were happy to be civilised towards Monaco.

I'm all for sportsmanship, but wait until the job is finished. You'd never catch me hugging my opponent in the sixth round!

Swedish stunner!

The new Volvo XC90 is a futuristic tech fest on wheels!

Think Volvo, and you're likely transported to that beige estate your dad drove when you were a kid. Boxy; safe; boring.

But oh, how things have changed. Nowadays, modern Volvos sport some seriously sexy styling and the latest in-car technology. The marque's latest XC90 for example features so many gadgets and gizmos, it's like piloting a giant iPad.

Both 2.0-litre petrol and diesel engines will be available upon launch, but we grabbed the keys to the mighty T8, which harnesses the power of hybrid tech and electric motors to help boost the petrol engine to 400bhp.

It goes like stink and, thanks to some clever interchangeable driving modes, actually handles pretty well, too. That's even more impressive considering this 4x4 monster weighs over two tonnes.

400bhp hybrid monster!

Inside is a palace of minimalist Swedish design, where tablet-style touchscreens replace switches, while leather and plush carpets deck out the interior instead of cheap plastic.

Even the instrument binnacles and dials have been replaced with a futuristic TFT screen and head-up display, which projects navigation, speed and vehicle information onto the windscreen.

Volvo claims the XC90 is only a few steps away from being fully autonomous, as its radar-based adaptive cruise control and sensor technology ensures the car stays in its lane and keeps up with stop/start traffic with no human input.

Welcome to the future!

IT'S THE NEW VOLVO XC90!

This controls everything, from multimedia to climate control. Operated with simple swipe, pinch and touch gestures, the system is also ready to run Apple CarPlay or Android Auto – as soon as the software is given the green light.

City safety

An entire suite of technology ensures the big Volvo constantly scans its surroundings at low speeds, and can warn if a collision is about to occur. The sensor tech can even recognise cyclists and slam on the brakes to prevent accidents.

Park Assist Pilot

Are you terrible at parking? Fear not! The XC90 can parallel park itself and even reverse park into tight spaces at your local supermarket. Simply activate the system, drive past a suitable space and let the car do the rest. Simples.

GET HARD

KEVIN HART

WILL FERRELL

When sensitive millionaire James King (Will Ferrell) is convicted of tax fraud and sentenced to a lengthy stretch in San Quentin, he employs the skills of "experienced" serial criminal Darnell (Kevin Hart) to help him toughen up.

Darnell's readiness program includes triggering park fights, creating his gang name "Mayo" (short for mayonnaise) and failing to master the mad dog face – despite having precisely zero knowledge of life in the slammer himself.

The laughs come thick-and-fast from one of the wackiest, uproarious and perfectly cast comedy pairings. And with Community's Alison Brie being an unbelievably seductive bonus, the rude and most outrageous gags will have you wiping away tears of disbelief. Don't miss! ★★★★☆

Interstellar

One-time astronaut Cooper (Matthew McConaughey) is forced to step in to save the human race and search for a new galaxy for us to inhabit. But could you make the journey through black holes and wormholes in the knowledge that you'll probably never clap eyes on your family again?

This modern classic is moving, awe-inspiring and unbelievable – and you won't need a degree in astrophysics to appreciate the gravity of this incredible flick. ★★★★☆

The Prodigy The Day Is My Enemy

Six years have passed since The Prodigy's last head-frazzling album, but on the evidence of the Essex dance troupe's latest offering, it's been well worth the wait.

The album's title track wastes no time, diving straight in with a head-banging anthem, then each addictive beat – inspired by the modern electro scene or nods to the band's earlier catalogue – ensures it's bigger, better and crazier with every track, marking it out as a very solid return. ★★★★☆

THE ZOO TIMELINE

We watch it so you don't have to!

Our hero, Gutshot, owes £10k and accepts a dodgy offer. So it begins...

Gutshot has the chance to bone a hot lady. He decides not to. Poor gambling.

Uh-oh – it's gone all black & white. Things must be getting serious.

THIS WEEK Gutshot Straight

A gambler is lured into a high-stakes game which might cost him his life...

This man is annoyed because he thinks he looks better in colour.

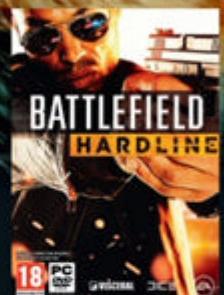

Hot lady shoots herself, Gutshot nicks the cash. Jackpot! The end.

GAME
of the week!

Battlefield Hardline

The number 13 might be widely considered to be unlucky, but for EA it's anything but. The 13th outing in the hugely popular Battlefield series is a right action-packed joyride.

Unlike past incarnations, Hardline breaks away from the tried and tested military formula, opting for an urban crime drama. The result is a seven-hour story mode akin to Bad Boys, mixed with the high-stakes twists, turns and corrupt cops of Training Day.

The multiplayer, while fun, is still arguably not up to the level of Call of Duty, but lifelong Battlefield fanatics will appreciate the change in pace, brought about by new game modes that include rescuing hostages from a building.

It was a bold change, but playing cops and robbers has never been such fun. ★★★★

The Hot List

Halo: Nightfall

Making a TV show from a video game rarely works out well, and despite Ridley Scott's involvement, Halo: Nightfall isn't any different. With the game's main character Master Chief replaced by a cast who – try as they might – are utterly boring, and CGI that's not up to scratch, you have to say Nightfall is, disappointingly, a missed opportunity. ★★☆☆☆

FILM!

Dragon Ball XenoVerse

Even if you have absolutely zero interest in anime, there's still some fun to be had in this beat-'em-up based on the massively popular animated series Dragon Ball. But, despite a unique storyline and some nice touches that allow you to customise your fighter, combat becomes at best a little dreary – and at worst, nigh-on-impossible! ★★☆☆☆

GAME!

Horns

When Daniel Radcliffe sprouts horns in the aftermath of his girlfriend's (Juno Temple) mysterious death, it sets in motion a very, very dark comedy with all the makings of a supernatural spin on Gone Girl. Unfortunately, there's little to remember, but any film with Harry Potter going off the rails for two hours is worth a punt for at least one viewing. ★★☆☆☆

DVD!

The Cribs For All My Sisters

The rock trio from Wakefield rather bravely claimed "punk rock and indie are dead" only a matter of weeks ago, and their sixth album embraces their new-found '80s pop music mantra. The 12 clean-cut tracks are chock-full of catchy melodies and licks that will take up residence in your head from the moment you press play. ★★★★☆

Sherlock's back in time for Christmas

After pictures of Holmes and Watson in 19th-century garb emerged recently, Sherlock co-creator Steven Moffat has confirmed the upcoming Christmas special will be set in Victorian London – more than 100 years in the past. "The special is its own thing," explained Moffat. "It's not part of the run of three episodes – it's Victorian. Kind of in its own little bubble."

Something to Crow about

British actor Jack Huston – best known for his cult hero role in Boardwalk Empire as a disfigured WWII vet-turn-assassin – had better get used to sitting in the make-up chair. Well, that's according to James O'Barr, writer of the original Crow comic book, who let slip at a convention, "Jack Huston has definitely been cast." Let's hope he has more luck than Brandon Lee.

Batfleck joins Suicide Squad?

Ben Affleck's Batman will appear in Suicide Squad, which is out late next year – only five months after Batman Vs Superman arrives. Directed by Fury's David Ayer, it centres on an all-star line-up of supervillains, recruited by a secret government agency to execute dangerous black ops. The Dark Knight makes a cameo as a shadowy figure also being tracked by the covert agency.

GOOD GOLLY, IT'S HOLLY!

Put down your beers and give three cheers for Miss Peers!

Since mid-2014, Holly Peers has been hidden away. But like her namesake festive decoration, once she's on display, she brings good will to all men – or at least those who bought this magazine.

Here, the Manc marvel reveals details of exactly what goes on when glamour girls get together, while revealing her penchant for normal blokes in trackies. We suggest it'd be a good idea to read on...

HI, HOLLY. WHERE HAVE YOU BEEN?

I've been busy, so the boobs are away a lot of the time now. I love shooting for ZOO, because I look amazing once you guys get hold of me! This is a treat! For you, I mean – not for me. I see them every day! LUCKY YOU. YOU LOOK IN GREAT SHAPE. WHAT HAVE YOU BEEN UP TO?

I hit the gym with Lissy Cunningham who lives near me. She's like my super-bossy personal trainer: she has me squatting with weights to boost my bum. She turns up super glamorous, like something from a pop video. I turn up in baggy trackies and no make-up. I catch sight of myself and I look like her skanky mate!

HOW DO THE MEN OF MANCHESTER REACT WHEN YOU TWO ARRIVE AT THE GYM?

When I look around, they look like they're trying to up their game for Lissy, grunting and flexing to look tough. But there are mirrors everywhere in the gym, so you always catch guys having a sneaky peek at our boobs! We were out shooting for Page 3 and a few of the girls were in the gym at 6am, sweating it out together. Sadly there weren't many blokes there to see that!

WHAT ARE THESE SHOOTS LIKE WHEN ➔

ALL YOU GLAMOUR MODELS GO ABROAD TOGETHER?

It's the ultimate male fantasy: extremely sexy girls in tiny bikinis, taking their clothes off. Like all ZOO shoots, we're so used to it, we don't care. But if you randomly brought a work experience lad along he'd probably pass out!

HOW MESSY DOES IT GET WHEN YOU'RE LET OFF THE LEASH?

We were in this bar in Tenerife called O'Neills. It's not flash, but they basically let us drink and put up with our mischief. Then, India Reynolds ruined it by throwing an ice cube at a stripper! The locals seem to notice when we're there.

There was this other random girl with her top off snogging blokes for bets and I just thought, "Oh no, they're gonna say it's a glamour model!" I promise it wasn't – honest.

IS INDIA THE MAIN TROUBLEMAKER?

She's outrageous. She came to stay with me the other week, and I actually outdid myself by drinking more than she did! We go out for a nice lunch and start with wine, then it sadly gets very boozy and out of control. Then we just eat. I woke up the next day and all the food had been eaten. All that was left were protein shakes and vodka!

YOU WITH HANGOVERS?

up feeling panicked and paranoid I've disgraced myself. I'm the worst dancer, yet when I'm drunk there's always some smartarse that films it all! Sabine [Jemeljanova] is always filming, as she loves a video! I'm always so ashamed of my dancing. At the time I think I look mint, but clearly I don't!

WHAT'S THE SEXIEST PICTURE YOU HAVE ON YOUR PHONE?

I love a sexy bikini selfie – just natural, a bit booby with a nice tan. It's sexy anyway isn't it, being at the beach?

IS THERE A SHOOT YOU'D LIKE TO DO WITH US? CAN WE MAKE YOU ANY MORE RUDE?

Oh, yeah! I love how you get these Instagram-effect campaigns at the moment that are very naked and rude. It's sort ➔ of raw and '70s, a bit like Kim Kardashian's second naked shoot! I'd like to do that, though I'm keeping my downstairs very much for myself! I'm not booking myself in for a full frontal here!

YOU'RE AN EXPERT ON UNDERWEAR. WHAT DO YOU LIKE WEARING?

I don't really like the overly, in-your-face lingerie. Nothing PVC or red, either. I like black, sophisticated and classic and suspenders: suspenders give you a nice, pinched-in waist and I feel very sexy wearing them. I love bras and pants that are sheer or have little cut-out sections.

SUSPENDERS? DO YOU ACTUALLY WEAR THEM OUTSIDE OF SHOOTS?

I buy quite a few, actually. I do really like them. I wouldn't wear them on a night out, but I'd definitely wear them for a boyfriend. It's quite a serious thing – I worry I'll look stupid in them and a guy might laugh!

WHAT'S THE MOST RECENT SEXY THING YOU'VE BOUGHT?

I bought a sheer, dark-green bra. I know I just said I hated colours, but I love this one. It's not padded, and completely see-through. And I have the knickers to match...

FINALLY, WE UNDERSTAND YOU'RE BACK ON THE MARKET AT THE MOMENT. WHAT KIND OF BLOKES DO YOU LIKE?

I don't have a type – in fact, all of my exes look freakishly different! I do like a bloke who dresses casually and I actually find guys in trackies quite sexy. Not on a date, though: I'd be absolutely mortified if they turned up like that!

I SURVIVED AN AVALANCHE

British adventurer Kenneth Jones shattered his hip bone and had to crawl for three days to safety through countryside brimming with wolves. This is his shocking tale...

Avalanches look fun. Impressive, even. Then one hits you, and it's no longer spectacular. One such snow slide engulfed ex-Army man Kenneth Jones, 37, 1.6 miles up the Moldoveanu mountains, Romania. Swept over two cliff edges, shattering his hip and facing a cold and lonely death, he assumed he was a goner.

With only meagre supplies, he crawled to safety through three freezing nights and four days. He lost his sanity and half his stomach, but miraculously kept his life.

This is Kenneth's story...

HOW TO GET HIT BY AN AVALANCHE...

"After six years spent with the Royal Marines, the Paratroopers and the SAS, I wanted a thrill. Moldoveanu – a land of wolves, bears and isolation – was perfect.

"I was near the top of the 2,500m Peak, when I heard a chilling groan and a distinct crack like you hear in cartoons. I just stood there petrified, unable to breathe or move. Then an entire 50m-wide section of the mountain cracked and slid downwards.

"I was in deep snow, weighed down by a pack and having to plough through thickets of trees. The noise and pace of the first avalanche was horrifying. You can't outrun it: you can only get out of its path. I escaped by running deeper into the cliff.

"Then a second, smaller one hit, but it came straight for me. It was like being smashed by a giant wave. You are just spinning around in the snow, trying to get upright but being constantly flattened."

FACING WHITE DEATH

"My Army drills taught me to start swimming as hard as I could, kicking frantically with my legs to try to avoid being buried. My other thought was being smashed to pieces against trees or rocks. Then I went over a cliff.

"One moment I was overwhelmed by one sense of fear, and then I was falling a long way – long enough to realise I was fed. I landed on my backside. The impact pulsed through my whole body and it felt like my lungs had been ripped out as the air escaped. I rolled head over heels through the forest, then it was blackness.

"When I woke up I never thought, 'Oh, I'll crawl all the way back.' I just figured the further down the mountain I went, the more likely I would be seen. I left a map with the reception desk at the hostel I was staying at, but they never alerted rescue. All I had was my Leatherman (right), Army survival rations, and some bashed-up sausage rolls. I only planned for a few days on the mountain, so why carry heavier stuff?"

AMAZING TRUE STORY!

ICE COLD

BROKEN HIP, UNBROKEN SPIRIT

"I could tell from the pain that my hip was broken. I'd crawl in a press up position for about a minute, then collapse, get my breath and go again. I was in total agony from my knee to my hip, then my other foot – because of frostbite – felt like a frozen block of ice. After a while it passed pain and developed into a swollen dullness, which was actually even more worrying.

"The cold was a constant enemy. I had no morale. Time collapses on itself and every second becomes an hour. I knew if I fell asleep, my body would shut down and I'd die. So I stayed awake the whole time. It was torture – agony and loneliness. By the third night, I had to physically hold my eyes open.

"Then, paranoia set in. What if a wolf could smell my blood? I lay there thinking about being torn apart. I wouldn't be able to stand to fight. In the day, exhaustion caused hallucinations. I'd see my mum's iced cakes and evil-faced cartoon characters. It made the interrogation training in the SAS look like a laugh."

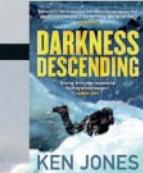

RESCUE AND REHAB

"On the first day, I managed 1km. The second, I doubled that to 2km. On the final day, numbed with cold, I managed five miles. I ditched equipment because I couldn't carry it; I lost a boot and had to cross frozen streams. In the freezing water, the danger was I couldn't feel my feet. Every time I put my foot down I doubted I was touching the bottom.

"I crawled into a village and the police thought I'd been chucked off a mountain then driven to safety! Frostbite took the tops of four toes and my starved stomach was so ulcerated it collapsed in on itself. I was freakishly lucky to keep my leg.

"It was then two years before I took another step and three before I could walk again. Then there was my stomach. My SAS instructor once told me try not to get shot in the stomach, as it is the most painful way to go. In the end, doctors ended up removing most of mine – I now only have a third of it left!"

How to survive an avalanche!

- Keep energy bars and survival rations in body pockets. The bottom of your rucksack is no good in an avalanche.
- Ditch any heavy equipment: it will weigh you down in your escape and bury you further if the snow hits.
- Once it hits, swim or paddle upwards – front crawl or breast stroke – as hard as you can. This will help you keep at the top of the snow once it settles.
- When it stops, dribble. Your saliva will show you which way is up as very often, victims are upside-down.
- Create an air pocket. The larger the pocket, the longer you can survive under the snow.

She is leaning against a white wall and looking over her shoulder at the camera. Both women are wearing black high-heeled sandals.

LIBBY!

EMMA!

Sometimes you have to admit your job is pretty awesome. Someone in the ZOO team had to help rearrange gorgeous Libby Smith's bra whenever she popped out. Simply because, as you can see, she was already tied up.

And not to be outdone, Emma Glover offered to wear arguably the most indecent pants we've ever laid eyes on. These are two girls who very much like to take control. We'll let them tell you all about it... ➔

Emma & Libby, NAUGHTY & NUDE!

Emma Glover and Libby Smith show us who's boss. You'd better take notes – we don't think they'll tell you twice!

HI, GIRLS. THIS SHOOT LOOKS LIKE FUN. WHAT NAUGHTINESS WENT ON?

Libby Smith It got quite rude, but it was always nice rather than too naughty.

Emma Glover I love my job! It's so funny. I love Libby, so it's great having her straddle me naked. You can't do that if you don't know someone!

L Well, you can. You'd just get into more trouble!

WOULD THIS EVER GET PLAYED OUT IN YOUR OWN BEDROOMS?

EI'm not into the rope. I mean, that's just too much effort, isn't it? You'd just get cable ties or handcuffs, wouldn't you?

LOr a guy's silk tie – they're more to hand, aren't they? What kind of guy has rope kicking around his flat?

EAlso, no offence, but I dread to think where ZOO got rope from. Someone probably towed their car in with it yesterday!

IT WAS ACTUALLY FROM AN UPMARKET SEX SHOP!

WHAT DID YOU THINK OF THE OTHER GEAR?

EI loved my pants. The backless, buttless pants! Hot.

LI loved those. I did like my pants, but they are my own! I arrived in such sexy knickers the stylist was like, "Yeah, you can keep them on!" Ha ha!

Though my bra was too small.

E Yeah, I had to keep tucking her nipple back in. Which was nice for both of us, if I'm honest!

WOW. THAT'S QUITE A GOOD GIG TO GET...

EIt's very intimate. I'm not sure I even asked to touch her nipples!

LOur bodies were entwined. It's like a giant game of Twister!

E"Right hand green, slap bum red!" Ha ha!

IT SOUNDS LIKE QUITE HARD WORK. ARE YOU TWO EVER OUT OF BREATH?

LModelling is really hard on the body. You ache for days afterwards as you're basically doing lunges and press ups all day in high heels!

EWe should do a Glamour Girl Workout – we could package it! ➔

“I like stealing boys’ pants!”

WHAT ABOUT THE NIPPLE COVERS? DO THEY HURT WHEN YOU TAKE THEM OFF?

E No, they are more like tearing a sticking plaster off! Though I like them – they’re less fuss than a rope, anyway! I could actually wear them down the supermarket. I’d like it that I would be the only one who knew I had them on.

WHAT’S THE SEXIEST UNDERWEAR YOU OWN?

L I did buy a really pretty Victoria’s Secret outfit, but I can’t wear it under any clothes as it has a high neck.

E So it’s sex-only underwear! You put it on for two minutes then take it off again. My house is now a boudoir for sexy underwear. I have stuff I wear at home, then stuff for work.

WHAT’S THE SEXIEST PICTURE YOU’VE TAKEN?

E Mine would be from a shoot in Ibiza. I was in the pool and went to take my pants off and the snapper shouted, “Stay still, that looks awesome!” I was in silhouette from behind, but through the outline of my bum cheeks you can see the sun! It’s printed on my hallway wall. Builders do a double take!

L There’s one of me drinking milk, butt naked on a hotel floor. That gets a lot of views!

TELL US A SECRET ABOUT THE OTHER GIRL WE WOULDN’T KNOW...

L Emma was once so drunk, I had to pull her pants down →

“This was like a giant so she could go for a wee!

E Libby always gets into other girls' beds butt naked...

WHAT MAKES THE BEST NIGHT OUT – CORNER OF A PUB OR SWANKY BAR?

L Either! I like being drunk in a corner of a pub or drunk all dressed up in a fancy bar.

E There needs to be dancing and food. I get very angry if I can't eat something!

WHAT BLOKES DO YOU GO FOR IN THESE PLACES?

E I like a nice broad back and arms. They don't have to be super muscly – just look after themselves.

L I like a nice "V": broad shoulders, tiny waist. I like a pretty guy in a nice fitted suit.

E Yeah, a nice suit can take a guy up from a six to an eight.

WHAT DO YOU WEAR ON A NIGHT OUT?

E I either do boobs or legs. You can't do both.

L I go super tight. Dresses and outfits that hug my body. The kind I can't wear underwear with...

E Libby wants to be naked and drink tea. And wear boy pants!

LIBBY, PLEASE EXPLAIN...

L I like them as they are still really tight but have a little hole in the front. Boys come round and I basically steal them! Please don't send me any, though. I like to pick myself!

THE BEST, BIGGEST AND FUNNIEST STORIES FROM THE WORLD OF SPORT!

CHRIS KAMARA'S ENGLAND PREVIEW!

"Harry Kane can save Roy's job"

Sky Sports' Chris Kamara gives ZOO the lowdown on England's next two matches

The squad

"Roy Hodgson has absolutely made the right decision bringing Harry Kane into the squad, and he's in line to win his first cap. Scoring 26 goals in all competitions is a fantastic achievement on its own, and an England call-up is the least he deserves. England are fortunate to have plenty of young players coming into form at the same time, and the lack of talk about injured players just proves the Three Lions' new-found strength in depth."

Selection headaches

"Some might see having four top strikers in the squad as a hindrance, but I believe it's a situation Roy Hodgson will relish. Wayne Rooney will start – he's the captain and that guarantees his position. Harry Kane is the in-form striker, so should take the other centre-forward berth. Brendan Rodgers and Liverpool will be done some favours, as I see Daniel Sturridge being used sparingly. He still doesn't look totally match-fit."

The opposition

"You've got to respect everybody in this competition, and Lithuania are no different. They've never qualified for a major competition and are a relatively new country in footballing terms. They've made a solid start, racking up six points, but England look to be running away with the group. Lithuania could stake their claim for second spot if they pull off a few shock wins. England have to be at their absolute best for the supporters."

→ Kammy is a Ladbrokes ambassador. For all of his views on the latest football stories, read his blog at news.ladbrokes.com/chris-kamara-talks

Missing out

"There are a number of players who haven't made the squad, but they cannot let it affect them. Stewart Downing and Rickie Lambert have staked claims recently, but due to poor form and lack of games, the gaffer has decided to leave them out. There is no way they'll be out of the squad forever, and Roy will have called them and given them targets, so they can fight their way back in. England are not short of players hungry to fight for their place, which is a huge positive."

Last chance saloon

"It's important for Roy that people see him as the right man. He's done OK, but it's time to see real progression with the next generation of players. He's had a good innings so far, taking the side to Euro 2012 and the World Cup in Brazil, but this is his final chance. He's had more opportunities than most England managers, so has to make this one count. I don't think there's any doubt England won't qualify for Euro 2016, so for Roy it's all about how we perform in France. He's had two strikes – he won't last in the job with three."

Not so friendly

"England have never performed well against Italy. I was convinced they'd reached a turning point in Brazil, where the first 60 minutes were fantastic. But as usual, it turned to disappointment. The friendly against the Azzurri has to be seen as more than that. Italy have great pedigree, and Andrea Pirlo – despite his age – is still a fantastic footballer. England have to outperform world-class players if they want to have a chance at major tournaments."

KELL BROOK TALKS TO ZOO!

“It scares me to death knowing there’s a guy wanting to take my title!”

Special K on his fight with Jo Jo Dan, his stabbing and fighting Mayweather Jr or Pacquiao!

HI, KELL. TELL US WHAT HAPPENED WHEN YOU WERE STABBED IN THE LEG IN TENERIFE.

Just after the attack, I can remember blood squirting out of my leg and then my life flashing right in front of me. I laid in hospital for four or five days and nobody could speak English. No one was telling us what was going on and I didn't know if I'd ever walk again.

SO, HOW HAS YOUR COMEBACK BEEN?

I went from the top of the world to bottom of the ocean in an instant. I had just won the world championship in California, then the next minute I was on the operating table. I had great momentum, with plans to get straight back in the ring in December. But I've had to slowly and surely make a recovery, taking baby steps. Now I'm able to train and I've been through a full camp. I can do everything I could before. Now it's all about getting back in the ring against Jo Jo Dan.

WHAT CAN WE EXPECT OF YOUR OPPONENT?

He's the mandatory fighter, and has got himself in a position to fight for the title like I did before beating Shawn Porter. I want to get this mandatory defence out of the way and then target those mega-fights. He's dreaming of a world title, so I know he'll bring the heat. But trust me, he won't be doing that!

WILL YOU MAINTAIN YOUR HIGH KNOCKOUT RATE?

When I feel a little wobble, I'm going to finish him – no matter what. When I hurt someone, I want to finish them! Being undefeated in 33 fights and being world champion makes me frightened of losing something. It makes me train even harder and scares me to death knowing there's another guy out there training hard and wanting to take that undefeated record away from me.

HOW IMPORTANT IS IT TO MAKE YOUR RETURN IN FRONT OF A HOMETOWN CROWD?

After everything that has happened in the last six months, it feels incredible knowing I'll be defending my world title in Sheffield. I'm going to be walking out of the tunnel and looking at all of the fans there. Once I'm through the ropes and look at my opponent, I'll feel like a lion – unbreakable.

AFTER THE MANDATORY

FIGHT, WHAT'S NEXT?

British fans want to see huge fights, like me and Amir Khan at Wembley. It was a long road to being a world champion, and these are the big fights I want. It's going to be me in the ring with somebody who is in the top 10. Soon, there will be two men holding the welterweight belts – me and Floyd Mayweather Jr or Manny Pacquiao. I'm open to a unification fight.

Catch Lewis... ...if you can!

BBC F1 expert James Allen looks at the biggest challenges facing Lewis Hamilton's dominance as the circus heads to Malaysia

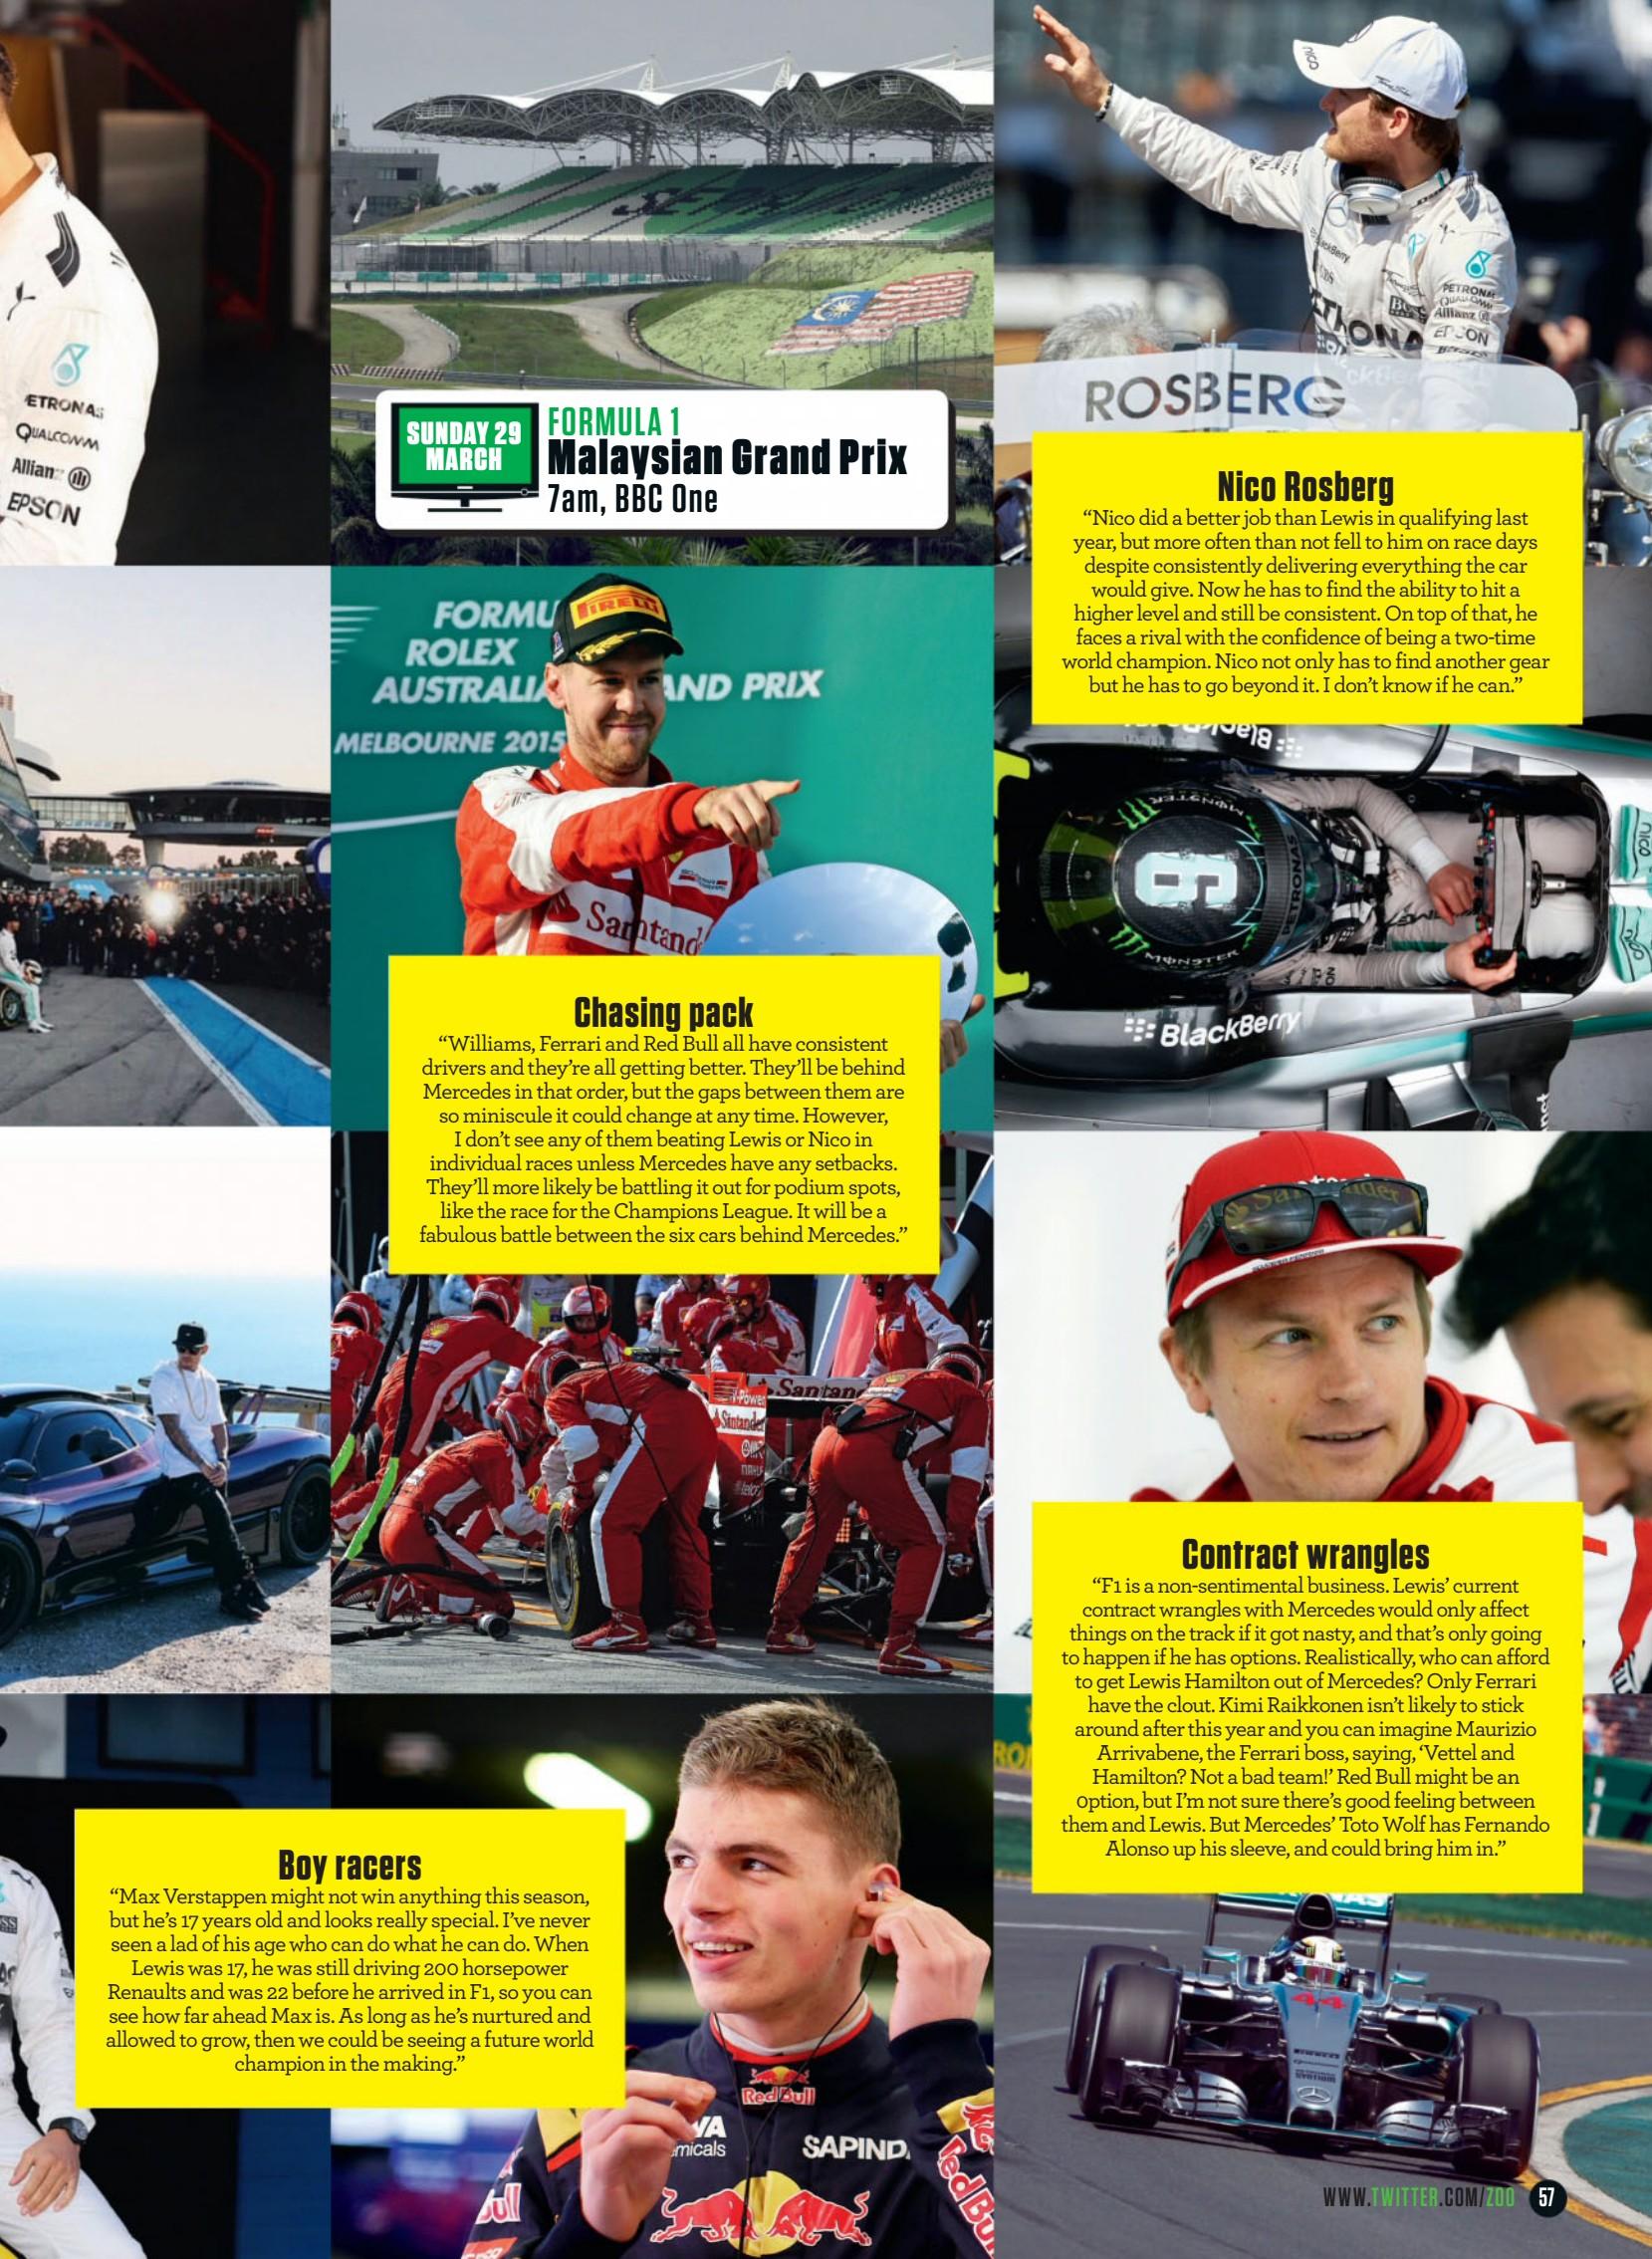

The man himself

"I've known Lewis since he was a teenager, and he's gone through many different phases in his life. Nico Rosberg is an incredibly consistent person who's had the same girlfriend since he was 16, and the same people around him. Lewis regularly changes his appearance and the way he feels about things, but he's pound-for-pound the most talented driver on the circuit and has the capability to beat everybody. But he also has the capability to undermine himself. Whether that side will come out, or he'll be able to pull it together week-after-week is the main question he has to answer in 2015."

SUNDAY 29
MARCH

FORMULA 1 Malaysian Grand Prix 7am, BBC One

Nico Rosberg

"Nico did a better job than Lewis in qualifying last year, but more often than not fell to him on race days despite consistently delivering everything the car would give. Now he has to find the ability to hit a higher level and still be consistent. On top of that, he faces a rival with the confidence of being a two-time world champion. Nico not only has to find another gear but he has to go beyond it. I don't know if he can."

Chasing pack

"Williams, Ferrari and Red Bull all have consistent drivers and they're all getting better. They'll be behind Mercedes in that order, but the gaps between them are so minuscule it could change at any time. However, I don't see any of them beating Lewis or Nico in individual races unless Mercedes have any setbacks. They'll more likely be battling it out for podium spots, like the race for the Champions League. It will be a fabulous battle between the six cars behind Mercedes."

Contract wrangles

"F1 is a non-sentimental business. Lewis' current contract wrangles with Mercedes would only affect things on the track if it got nasty, and that's only going to happen if he has options. Realistically, who can afford to get Lewis Hamilton out of Mercedes? Only Ferrari have the clout. Kimi Raikkonen isn't likely to stick around after this year and you can imagine Maurizio Arrivabene, the Ferrari boss, saying, 'Vettel and Hamilton? Not a bad team!' Red Bull might be an option, but I'm not sure there's good feeling between them and Lewis. But Mercedes' Toto Wolf has Fernando Alonso up his sleeve, and could bring him in."

Boy racers

"Max Verstappen might not win anything this season, but he's 17 years old and looks really special. I've never seen a lad of his age who can do what he can do. When Lewis was 17, he was still driving 200 horsepower Renaults and was 22 before he arrived in F1, so you can see how far ahead Max is. As long as he's nurtured and allowed to grow, then we could be seeing a future world champion in the making."

CHAMPIONS LEAGUE FAILURES

WHY ARE THE ENGLISH

Premier League hopes for another Champions League title have been dashed for this season, but why have

Defence is the new attack

The levels of attacking excitement might be great for the Premier League, but it is really hampering English influence on the Champions League. In 2008, when four Premier League teams reached the Quarter-Finals, they only conceded three goals against foreign opposition in the entire knockout stages. Fast forward to this year, and our three representatives conceded nine times in the first knockout stage alone!

Winter break?

It's not a new phenomenon and it's been an issue in Europe before, but Barcelona boss Luis Enrique agreed Manchester City's heavy schedule played a part in his side's victory. "We're used to resting during the winter, so we enjoy watching the English teams playing. I've also heard Ronald Koeman complain about the schedule in England," said the Barça chief. City may have an argument: they played five times while the Catalans players had their feet up at home.

Financial Fair Play

Perhaps not the strongest defence of the weak performances dished out by the English contingent, but it's certainly a contributing factor. Manchester City fell foul of FFP and had their Champions League squad trimmed to 21 men, instead of the normal 25. The other English failures aren't allowed near this excuse, as they've all spent as much as Real Madrid and Barcelona – who are in the next round!

Possession football

The box-to-box action, where mistakes aren't so routinely punished, makes English football exciting but isn't translating into Champions League success, and the European pass masters are influencing the way the Champions League is being won. Since 2005, Jose Mourinho's Inter Milan have been the only foreign team to win the competition and fallen outside the top 10 sides based on passes per match.

Star players

In England's European Cup heyday, clubs boasted squads positively brimming with star talent. Gareth Bale almost single-handedly took Spurs to a Champions League Quarter-

Final, while Ronaldo topscored as Manchester United won their third title. Now England is no longer the destination for top players. In recent years, more high profile stars have left the Premier League than ever before. And of the eight teams still left, two have top scorers who were signed from the Premier League.

FANZONE!

Gun to sleep

Arsenal fans might not be known for the volume inside the Emirates, but they must have been in particularly poor form during their 3-0 win over West Ham, as this couple was snapped catching forty winks. Like Arsene Wenger, they didn't see any incidents.

Foul throw

Premier League ref Lee Mason fully justified people's anger after allowing QPR's Shaun Wright-Phillips to take a throw-in while standing on the pitch. You can't blame SWP: he must have forgotten the rules after spending over two years on the sidelines...

THE BEST BANTER FROM THE BACK OF THE STANDS

Wrong turn

These poor fellas had a shock when they saw Italy and France run out at the Stadio Olimpico, rather than their beloved England. For reasons unknown, they booked flights, hotels and match tickets thinking the Red Rose would be playing. Luckily, they saw the funny side, still kitted out in their fancy dress and armed with a hand-made banner. Which was more interesting than the game.
